CELEBRATING 75 YEARS

We are thrilled to announce the celebration of our 75th anniversary! Over a casual conversation between Chancellor William Tolley and Thomas Watson, the Press was established to publish what would be its first title, IBM's Precision Measurement in the Metal Working Industry in 1943. Since that time, Syracuse University Press has been committed to serving the state—as well as the region, nation, and globe—by publishing vital scholarship, sharing ideas, and giving voice to important stories that may not have otherwise been told.

But we wouldn't have made it here without support—your support. So thanks to all of our partners, readers, interns, staff, authors, board members, and friends. This is just as much a celebration of you.

For information on how you can support Syracuse University Press, please contact Ronald Thiele at 315-443-2537 or giving.syr.edu.
