The International Politics of the Persian Gulf
Edited by Mehran Kamrava

For much of the contemporary history of the Middle East, the Persian Gulf has stood at the center of the region’s strategic significance. At the same time, this area has been wracked by much political instability and tension. Today the Gulf states are undergoing profound changes that range from rapid economic and infrastructural development to tumultuous social and cultural changes. Far from eroding the region’s political significance, these changes have only accentuated local rivalries and tensions and have brought to the forefront new challenges to regional security and stability.

Together the essays in this volume present a comprehensive, detailed, and accessible account of the international politics of the region. Focusing on the key factors that give the Persian Gulf its strategic significance, contributors look at how the vast deposits of oil and natural gas influence international politics, the impact of the competing regional superpowers of Iran and Saudi Arabia, the nature of relationships among countries within the Persian Gulf, and the evolving relationship between Islam and politics in the region. Throughout the collection issues of internal and international security are central to the region’s politics.

Modernity, Sexuality, and Ideology in Iran
The Life and Legacy of Popular Iranian Female Artists
Kamran Talattof

In Modernity, Sexuality, and Ideology in Iran, Talattof finds that the process of modernity never truly unfolded in Iran, due in large part to the nation’s reluctance to embrace the seminal subjects of gender and sexuality. Talattof’s approach reflects a unique look at modernity as not only advances in industry and economy but also advances toward an open, intellectual discourse on sexuality.

The Education of Women and The Vices of Men
Two Qajar Tracts
Translated from the Persian by Hasan Javadi and Willem Floor

“Vices of Men is a celebrated text in Iranian women’s studies. Bibi Khanom Astarabadi wrote it because she was angry at the misogynistic advice in Education of Women. This classic essay is remarkable for its frank language, and the ease with which the author speaks of women’s lives and their most intimate issues.” — Janet Afary, author of Sexual Politics in Modern Iran

Words, Not Swords
Iranian Women Writers and the Freedom of Movement
Farzaneh Milani

“The breadth and depth of her work is astounding, expansive, and extensive—a tour de force.”
—Shahla Haeri, author of No Shame for the Sun

A woman not only needs a room of her own, as Virginia Woolf wrote, but also the freedom to leave it and return to it at will. The privilege of self-directed movement, the power to pick up and go as one pleases, has not been a traditional “right” of Iranian women. This prerogative has been denied them in the name of piety, anatomy, chastity, class, beauty, and even safety. Only during the last 160 years have Iranian women been able to renegotiate boundaries to emerge as a moderating, modernizing force.

In Words, Not Swords, Milani explores the development of Iranian women's literary voices, identifying women's confinement and limited mobility as the source of their subjection and quasi-invisibility in Iranian literature.

Milani devotes much of the book to four of the most significant Iranian women writers: Simin Behbahani, Shahrnush Parsipur, Forugh Farrokhzad, and Tahereh Qurratul’Ayn. These writers illustrate the extraordinary defiance women have shown in questioning centuries-old traditions, gender segregation, and immobility.

Syracuse Studies on Peace and Conflict Resolution
Western Sahara
War, Nationalism, and Conflict Irresolution
Stephan Zunes and Jacob Mundy

“Thoughtful and impressive . . . Zunes and Mundy provide valuable insights on the importance of enabling the people of the Western Sahara to determine their own future through a democratic referendum.” —the late Senator Edward Kennedy

“A timely and scholarly synthesis presented with clarity and comprehension. Backed by their fieldwork, the authors consider Western Sahara’s irresolution as a consequence of not only competing nationalisms (and interfering actors), but also of conflicting imaginations of polity and society.” —Phillip Naylor, author of France and Algeria

In the first book-length treatment of the issue in over two decades, Zunes and Mundy examine the origins, evolution, and resilience of the Western Sahara conflict, deploying a diverse array of sources and firsthand knowledge of the region gained from multiple research visits. Shifting geographical frames—local, regional, and international—provide for a robust analysis of the stakes involved.

Policing Egyptian Women
Sex, Law, and Medicine in Khedival Egypt
Liat Kozma

Policing Egyptian Women traces the intricate manner in which the modern state in Egypt monitored, controlled, and “policed” the bodies of subaltern women. Illustrating the ways in which the practices of the modern state gave rise to modern subjectivities, Kozma shows how subaltern women experienced and helped shape nineteenth-century modernity.

Gender and Globalization
Artisan Entrepreneurs in Cairo and Early Modern Capitalism (1600–1800)
Nelly Hanna

"An extremely important and original book that fills a black hole not only in Egyptian social history but also that of Ottoman history in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries."—Huri Islamoglu, editor of Constituting Modernity: Private Property in the East and West

Little has been written about the economic history of Egypt prior to its incorporation into the European capitalist economy. While historians have mined archives and court documents to create a picture of the commercial activities, networks, and infrastructure of merchants during this time, few have documented a similar picture of the artisans and craftspeople. Artisans outnumbered merchants and their economic weight was considerable, yet details about their lives, the way they carried out their work, and their role or position in the economy is largely unknown. Hanna seeks to redress this gap with Artisan Entrepreneurs in Cairo and Early Modern Capitalism (1600–1800) by locating and exploring the role of artisans in the historical process.

Militant Women of a Fragile Nation
Malek Abisaab

“An unparalleled account of the role of women in labor in the construction of the modern Lebanese state.”—Irene Gendzier, Boston University

The author traces the conditions and experiences of women workers at the French Tobacco Monopoly. Challenging the prevailing assumptions about culturally inscribed roles for Middle Eastern women, the book highlights traditions of public activism and militancy among rural women that are in turn adapted to the spaces of the factory. This richly detailed work illuminates the impact of class and gender in the transformation of modern Lebanon.

Arab and Arab American Feminisms

Gender, Violence, and Belonging

Edited by Rabab Abdulhadi, Evelyn Alsultany, and Nadine Naber

In this collection, Arab and Arab American feminists enlist their intimate experiences to challenge simplistic and long-held assumptions about gender, sexuality, and commitments to feminism and justice-centered struggles. Contributors hail from multiple geographical sites, spiritualities, occupations, sexualities, class backgrounds, and generations. Poets, creative writers, artists, scholars, and activists employ a mix of genres to express feminist issues and highlight how Arab and Arab American feminist perspectives simultaneously inhabit multiple, overlapping, and intersecting spaces: within families and communities; in anticolonial and antiracist struggles; in debates over spirituality and the divine; within radical, feminist, and queer spaces; in academia and on the street; and between each other.

Abundance from the Desert

Classical Arabic Poetry

Raymond Farrin

“One of the most important books to have been written in the field in a very long time. . . . Farrin is not only a conscientious scholar, but also a very refined and sensitive literary critic.” — James T. Monroe, editor of Hispano Arabic Poetry

Abundance from the Desert provides a comprehensive introduction to classical Arabic poetry, one of the richest of poetic traditions. Moving beyond a mere chronicle, Farrin outlines a new approach to appreciating classical Arabic poetry based on an awareness of concentric symmetry, in which the poem’s unity is viewed not as a linear progression but as an elaborate symmetrical plot. In doing so, the author presents these works in a broader, comparative light, revealing connections with other literatures. The reader is invited to examine these classical Arabic works not as isolated phenomena— notwithstanding their uniqueness and their association with a discrete tradition—but rather as part of a great multicultural heritage. This pioneering book marks an important step forward in the study of Arabic poetry. At the same time, it opens the door to this rich tradition for the general reader.

Modern Arab American Fiction

A Reader’s Guide

Steven Salaita

Within the spectrum of American literary traditions, Arab American literature is relatively new. Writing produced by Americans of Arab origin is mainly a product of the twentieth century and only started to flourish in the past thirty years. While this young but thriving literature varies widely in content and style, it emerges from a common community and within a specific historical, political, and cultural context. In Modern Arab American Fiction, Salaita maps out the landscape of this genre as he details rather than defines the last century of Arab American fiction.

Exploring the works of such best-selling authors as Rabih Alameddine, Mohja Kahf, Laila Halaby, Diana Abu-Jaber, Alicia Erian, and Randa Jarrar, Salaita highlights the development of each author’s writing and how each has influenced Arab American fiction. He examines common themes including the Israel-Palestine conflict, the Lebanese Civil War of 1975–90, the representation and practice of Islam in the U.S., social issues such as gender and national identity in Arab cultures, and the various identities that come with being Arab American.
